Objectives of Programme:

- To discuss Intellectual Property Rights concept
- To know the importance of IPR, from management perspective

Description of Programme:

Intellectual property (IP) is a category of property that includes intangible creations of the human intellect. There are many types of intellectual property, and some countries recognize more than others. The most well-known types are copyrights, patents, trademarks, and trade secrets. It was not until the 19th century that the term "intellectual property" began to be used, and not until the late 20th century that it became commonplace in the majority of the world.

The main purpose of intellectual property law is to encourage the creation of a wide variety of intellectual goods. To achieve this, the law gives people and businesses property rights to the information and intellectual goods they create, usually for a limited period of time. This gives economic incentive for their creation, because it allows people to profit from the information and intellectual goods they create. These economic incentives are expected to stimulate innovation and contribute to the technological progress of countries, which depends on the extent of protection granted to innovators.

4) Dr. Sheena Abraham madam highlighted following information:

“The intangible nature of intellectual property presents difficulties when compared with traditional property like land or goods. Unlike traditional property, intellectual property is "indivisible" an unlimited number of people can "consume" an intellectual good without it being depleted.

“Intellectual property rights include patents, copyright, industrial design rights, trademarks, plant variety rights, trade dress, geographical indications, and in some jurisdictions trade secrets. There are also more specialized or derived varieties of sui generis exclusive rights, such as circuit design rights (called mask work rights in the US) and supplementary protection certificates for pharmaceutical products (after expiry of a patent protecting them) and database rights (in European law). The term "industrial property" is sometimes used to refer to a large subset of intellectual property rights including patents, trademarks, industrial designs, utility models, service marks, trade names, and geographical indications.”

Dr. Rohan Dahivale, proposed vote of thanks.

Outcomes:

- Students got basic information regarding IPR.
- Students understood the importance of IPR from management perspective

One Week FDP on “Case Study Writing”

Introduction:

Cases have become an integral part of management education today. The case study has been used by researchers for a long time and has been applied in different disciplines. It has been widely used in social sciences as a qualitative research method to investigate contemporary real-life situations and has provided a foundation of application of ideas and extension of methods. In this context, RIMRD intended to conduct the FDP workshop on “Case study Writing” for the Faculty Members.

Objectives of Faculty Development Program:

The participants through this FDP should:

1. Understand the case method in teaching of Management and Social Sciences;
2. To train faculty members in writing case studies and teaching notes.
3. To provide experiential learning and provide the participants hands-on exposure on identifying topics for developing case studies, doing research, writing a case study, editing a case study, developing a teaching note and publishing a case study.
4. After attending the workshop, the participants will be equipped to develop their own case studies and publish. Be motivated to write their own cases by understanding the intricacies of case writing process.

Description of FDP:

When using case study, the researcher will get an in-depth investigation of a phenomenon, individual, or an event. They help in investigating and understanding the underlying principles in an occurrence within a real-life context. While there are some difficulties associated with the delivery of case studies, these can be overcome through forward planning, background research and informed participant selection.
